

IN SOUTH GEORGIA'S MURDER MYSTERY

HAWTHORNE FREE: FEELS GREAT, BUT MORTON DOESN'T

"Since the men's protest we have been having a fairly good amount of food, but throughout my sentence my effort has been to keep my health, and with such food it was hard. I am happy even to come out alive."

Dr. Morton declared, however, that whatever faults the prison may have it is not due to Morton, or the officers, but to the system.

"MORTON NOT BLAMED," said both Dr. Morton and John Hawthorne, "is a fine man and all the officers of the prison are individually good. It is the system, however, that is the fault."

Dr. Morton and Hawthorne left the prison at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. Both were well made clothes and both were bound for the train that would carry them to New York.

AND A RED NECKTIE. John Hawthorne's suit was a light blue cloth and with it he wore a brilliant red necktie. The colors threw into prominence his ruddy face and white hair and the black suit hat which he wore further accentuated the healthy glow on his face.

"I felt like an immigrant with all these bundles," he said, "and the first thing I am going to do is to buy my suit case. And straight to the Westchester stores he went first."

Neither his clothes nor Dr. Morton's bore the stamp of prison tailoring, and he had been sent in from New York or the Atlanta stores.

Dr. Morton's dark suit was of distinguished style and cut and he, too, wore a red necktie. His hat was the standard of the season's fashion, and he carried over his arm a handsome overcoat lined with black satin.

FAREWELL LOOK AT PRISON. "We are glad to be out," said the physician, "and I want to get a look at the prison before I leave it for good."

Both Mr. Hawthorne and Dr. Morton made the trip into the city on the street car. As they climbed aboard and the conductor gave the signal to go, about a dozen or so prisoners who were at work in the front of the prison, broke off their hats and waved their hands in farewell to those who were fortunate enough to be leaving the walls.

They smiled in hearty good-byes and waved their hands cheerfully to the friendly crowd. The crowd, which had gathered out from the entry boxes as the two men passed, and with smiles and hearty words, sped them on their way.

Hawthorne said that he was surprised when he reached the prison at a number of things. He said the attitude of the warden and his men toward the prisoners was helpful and kind, and that he found his work on "Good Words," the prison paper, enjoyable.

"I did not know there was such a paper in the prison," said Hawthorne, "and I found it a pleasant surprise. I think it is unusually good, especially from a cyrographical standpoint."

HEALTH WEAKENED. Dr. Morton commented further on his life at the prison.

"I am not complaining," he said, "everybody was as courteous to me and to Mr. Hawthorne as they could possibly be, and things were not as hard as we feared they would be. You know for men of our age to have to serve a prison sentence is doubly hard. My health was weakened by the trial and I was afraid the prison life would further break it down."

Mr. Hawthorne is sixty-eight years old, and so am I. We were classmates together, and we will go back to New York together."

"He will resume his literary work, and I shall take up my medical practice again and continue my research work on cancer growths. I shall try to recuperate my shattered health and my shattered fortunes."

"As to the charge on which we were sentenced," he said in conclusion, "a third prisoner was also released on Wednesday but the officers at the prison declined to give him name."

the public after forty years of honorable active service. I have been a physician in New York for forty years, and have taught in the clinics and the schools. No one of my friends believe for an instant that I tried to defraud the public."

STILL BELIEVES IN MINES. "I believed in those mines, and I still believe in them. So does Mr. Hawthorne, but even if they were no good, as the government said, they did not take action against the principal men connected with it. One was not even indicted, through political influence, another got off because he is a lawyer, and a third also went free."

"We, Mr. Hawthorne and myself, were outsiders. It was easy to get their claws on a physician and a literary man, and so we came here. We came on Easter Sunday, a day of rejoicing, and we are going back on a joyful day. This sunshine seems auspicious."

"Later I shall make a complete statement in vindication of myself to the public. To my friends I need no vindication," he said in conclusion.

A third prisoner was also released on Wednesday but the officers at the prison declined to give him name."

It is one thing to make soda crackers that are occasionally good.

It is quite another thing to make them so that they are always better than all other soda crackers, always of unvarying goodness.

The name "Uneeda"—stamped on every biscuit—means that if a million packages of Uneeda Biscuit were placed before you, you could choose any one of them, confident that every soda cracker in that package would be as good as the best Uneeda Biscuit ever baked. Five cents.

MOTOR CAR'S BACKFIRE BURNS IT AND GARAGE

J. B. Joel Loses His Touring Car—Fire Wagon Wrecked on Run

Fire early Wednesday morning destroyed the touring car of J. B. Joel, of 57 West Fourteenth street, which was stored in a garage in the rear of the residence of W. D. Christie, 22 West Fourteenth street.

The chauffeur was in the act of cranking the car about 7 o'clock, when the engine back-fired. This set the car on fire, and flames soon ignited the garage. The fire department was called, and managed to keep the flames confined to the garage. The roof of the building was destroyed, and the machine wrecked.

In answering the alarm a wagon from No. 5 engine house on Carnegie way ran into a post at the corner of Twelfth street, and stopped the wagon pole. No one was hurt on the wagon. The accident happened when the driver attempted to make a short turn while going at a rapid rate.

POSTAL ACCUSES SOUTHERN BELL OF DISCRIMINATION

Asks Railroad Commission to Compel Prompt Telephone Connections

The complaint of the Postal Telegraph-Cable company against the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, in which the latter discriminates in favor of the Western Union Telegraph company by diverting messages to that company, was heard by the state railroad commission Wednesday morning.

It is contended by the Postal company that the Southern Bell operators show a preference for the Western Union company when they receive the code "call Telegram." It is also charged that the operators frequently assert that the lines to the Postal offices are busy when a specified demand is made for a connection with the offices of this company.

SAGE TEA DARKENS

HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

Mostly possessors fight on at Monroe, Walton county, which is attracting much attention and interest here, Mrs. W. A. Shasta is the present postmistress, having held the office since the last Cleveland administration. She is an applicant for reappointment and is opposed by Miss Clara Bell Hays, a popular young lady of Monroe. The term of Mrs. Shasta expires in January, and numerous letters of recommendation and many petitions are being received.

Koon interest is felt here over the report from Georgia that Federal Judge Monroe Speer is worse. The removal of the house is due to the fact that the work of the subcommittee will be deferred if Judge Speer's health does not improve.

NEGRO CHURCH IS SUED FOR DEBT ON ITS ORGAN

Henry Fletcher & Sons, a pipe organ manufacturing firm of Louisville, has entered suit in the superior court against the St. Paul African Methodist Episcopal church, as an organization, for $1,100, a balance alleged to be due on an organ installed in the church last year.

The remarkable part about the suit, according to attorneys Arnold & Donohue, who filed it, is the fact that the complaining firm has been in business for ninety-three years, and kept out of the courts completely during that period until they ran afoul of the local religious organization.

The organ was originally contracted for by the church association, but the debt was formally taken over by the church when the choir failed to meet the payments, according to the suit.

Mrs. Perkins is now either in New York or Boston, the petition alleges, and she will be served with notice of the suit by publication.

INJUNCTION HOLDS UP WHITEHALL REGRADING

Court's Order on Petition of Grocer W. L. Kelly Sets Saturday for Hearing

The work of regrading Whitehall street from Mitchell to Robertson street, which was commenced by the city and county authorities on Wednesday morning, was stopped by a superior court injunction at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The injunction was issued on a petition brought by Attorney McClelland & McClelland for W. L. Kelly, a grocer, who leases the premises at 118-120 Whitehall street, near Tenth.

Not only does the petitioner assert that the proposed regrading will do him irreparable injury, but he declares that if the work is done in accordance with the profile prepared by the chief of construction of the city, it will result in the collapse of his building. He asserts that the proposed work will be a menace to the life and limbs of the citizens of the county, and will result in great business loss to himself and other merchants on the street and inconvenience to the public.

MAKES UNIQUE POINT. The bill of injunction makes one unusual point, which is sustained, may prevent the county doing any more work on the streets of the city of Atlanta.

The petition quotes the section of the state code, which specifies for what purposes the board of county commissioners can use the money collected in taxes from the people. One of the uses specified is that "aiding and maintaining county roads." The petition makes the point that the city of Atlanta is in the municipality of Atlanta and under its control and not a county road. For that reason the petition alleges that the contract between the city of Atlanta and the county is void.

COUNCIL ACT "ILLEGAL." The petition charges that the resolution of the city council which provides for the work is illegal because it is in violation of the state code, which provides that property owners along the street are to pay a balance of not more than $1,000 on the work.

This money will really be a loan which the city must pay back to the property owners, the petition asserts, and is illegal for the city to borrow money in this manner. The resolution was to deceive the public, the suit charges.

The proposed work is illegal for another reason, the petition charges. The council resolution requires the county to perform the work, which, it is said, that it should be done after October 15 and without prejudice to other work already passed and agreed upon.

WOULD DELAY OTHER WORK. The regrading of the thoroughfare, according to the petition, has delayed the work on Allen, Lawton, Peachtree circle, Kirkwood avenue, and other streets. It is alleged, and accordingly is illegal because it is prejudicial to the interest of those streets.

Accordingly the petition prays that the city authorities and the county authorities be restrained and enjoined from proceeding with the work, and that the contract between the county and the city for the job be declared null and void.

Judge George L. Bell, of the superior court, who signed the temporary injunction, bailing the work, set the case for hearing on October 15, next Saturday.

Until that time, at least, there will be no more work on Whitehall street.

Immediately after securing the injunction, Attorney John S. McClelland, in company with a deputy sheriff, started serving the papers on the numerous city and county officials who are made a party to the suit.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS PLAN DAY OF THANKSGIVING Will Give Thanks for Bounty That Has Been Georgia's Lot

The present prosperity of Georgia will be celebrated with the Sunday schools of Atlanta on the Sunday before Thanksgiving. This was arranged at a monthly meeting of the superintendent of the Georgia Sunday school association, which was held at the First Christian church Tuesday evening.

The plan received the unanimous endorsement of all the superintendents of the association, and there will be special programs of music and speeches in their Sunday schools on that Sunday. Addresses Tuesday evening were made by Mr. Marion Holl, Dr. Joe Broughton, Major R. J. Quinn and others, who by their blessings which have been Georgia's good fortune.

"Efficiency in the Sunday School" was the subject of an address made by John J. Egan, in which he pointed to the achievement of Christ's band of twelve apostles in carrying the gospel to millions. He appealed to the Sunday schools to take lessons from the work of this band.

A delicious hot supper was served before the meeting, which was prepared by the ladies of the First Christian church. It was decided that the next meeting be held at the Hotel Ansley on November 11, which would be accompanied by a feast to which all the departmental and associate superintendents of the various Sunday schools would be specially invited guests. At this time suggestions for Christmas work of the schools will be discussed.

Damascus Postoffice Robbed Postoffice inspectors here have received a telegram from the postmaster of Damascus, in Early county in southwest Georgia, that the office safe was stolen Tuesday night.

No particulars were given beyond the bare statement that the safe was demolished.

ENJOYING A "MADE IN ATLANTA" BANQUET

Atlanta Retail Grocers and Butchers gathered in the Rhodes building Tuesday night and partook of a feast of Atlanta-manufactured delicacies.

GROCERS AND BUTCHERS PLAN FOOD EXHIBIT

O. T. Camp Demonstrates Atlanta's Products in Production of Foodstuffs

A delicious buffet luncheon of Atlanta-made products was served the members of the Atlanta Retail Grocers and Butchers association by O. T. Camp, of the Camp Grocery company, at the meeting of the association in the Rhodes building Tuesday evening.

Cold ham was served with the best of Atlanta made bread, and Atlanta grown tomatoes and lettuce, with Atlanta made mayonnaise dressing, made up a salad fit for a king.

While everyone was enjoying the repast, O. T. Camp, who acted as host, was surprised by the presentation of a handsome gold watch and fob, the gift of the clerks of the Grocers' association.

B. H. Mayo spoke in behalf of the clerks, and said that the gift was a token of their appreciation of the work Mr. Camp had done when he inaugurated the Wednesday noon closing hour each week during the past summer.

In a few well chosen words, Mr. Camp thanked the donors for their thoughtful remembrance of his efforts, stating that he was always ready and willing to help the clerks.

It is Mr. Camp's idea to have a regular exhibit of Atlanta made products at some future time in Taft hall, when the retail grocers will demonstrate to the housewives of Atlanta that they can get the best of everything for the table right at the very doors from Atlanta manufacturers.

The officers of the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association are: O. T. Camp, president; R. A. McMurray, vice president; and J. P. Eve, secretary and treasurer.

Besides the officers among those present Tuesday evening were: A. W. Farlinger, F. E. Kramer, J. J. Evans, R. A. McCall, V. S. Chelena, F. P. Phillips, W. E. Adams, J. W. Hayes, John Aklin, J. A. Hudson, J. R. Morris, J. H. Roster, J. W. Green, R. H. Comer, H. Buchanan, B. H. Mayo, M. W. Cowan, A. H. Chapman, C. D. Wilson, D. L. Thomas and others.

Appetite Ho! Ho! 'Tis a Great Joy

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are the Best Appetite Makers, Dyspepsies and Stomach Sufferers Can Use.

Appetite is very largely a series of stirrings from the stomach. When one has a rousing appetite at the sight or smell of food the stomach through its connection with the mind of man is asked whether the food seen or smelled would be welcome.

The stomach if healthy says yes and at once our mouths water and we are hungry from desire—keenly, ravenously, hungrily. If the stomach be sick then we have no appetite and are actually repulsed.

Water—How's your appetite today, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets make me eat like a horse.

Appetite makes the glands of the mouth open and saliva flows very freely—hence the term "Mouth, Water." This is the first digestive juice. It has an important office to perform as all starchy foods are partially digested by it because of the lactulose, which is almost an instant digestive of starch. This process reduces the starch in foods to sugar.

The appetite causing a free flow of saliva aids the stomach by its ability to mix the food eaten with mouth juices which enables it to more readily do its work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the mouth like food, are eaten, then dissolved and fluidized by the saliva. This mass then goes into the stomach and there quickly dissolves, the stomach juices so that in a short time food is not offensive and man's appetite comes speedily back to him and he is hungry in a healthy, normal way.

By all means use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the very moment you feel a loss of hunger. The quick return of appetite to you will convince you quickly that your stomach has been out of order and that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were the means of restoring its normally healthy condition.

Every druggist carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and no matter where you may be you can always get a box anywhere for 50 cents.—(Adv.)

NO MORE GOVERNMENT MONEY FOR LOCAL BANKS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13.—The department of the treasury cannot increase the deposits of any of the Atlanta banks. This was ascertained when an effort was made to have the deposits in one of the national depositories increased. The information was given out that there was no city in the country which had more government money on deposit than did Atlanta, considering all matters. This speaks the confidence of the government in the stability of the Atlanta banking institutions.

UBIQUITOUS OTHER MAN CAUSES DIVORCE SUIT

Alleged that the wife refuses to go with him to any place unless they are accompanied by a boarder in the house, and that when the three go out together he (the husband) is completely ignored by the two others, George H. Mulkey has filed suit for divorce from Mrs. Eugenia Mulkey.

They were married in South Carolina in 1893 and separated twenty years later, October 13, 1913, according to the petition which was filed in the superior court on Tuesday by Attorney Poole & Lewis.

Mulkey declares that he and his wife moved here in 119 South Pryor street

In the fall of 1911 and that in January, 1912, his wife became infatuated with the boarder, John A. Harris. She begged the boarder to leave his wife and he begged his wife to leave his boarder, he declares, but the wife in spending practically all of her time with the boarder, he alleges, allows him to see her except in the boarder's presence.

J. P. Austin in Bankruptcy J. P. Austin, M. A. Martin and Montgomery, Houston & Robinson have brought an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against Joseph T. Austin, of Lawrenceville. On their petition, S. Robinson was appointed receiver of the court.

All Clogged Up? Here's Quick Relief

A Simple Remedy to Correct Constipation Before It Becomes Chronic.

Very few people go through life without some time or other being troubled with constipation. This condition is caused by the use of strong cathartics, salts, mineral waters, pills and similar things. They have temporary value in some cases, it is true, but the good effect is soon lost, and the more one takes of them the less effective they become.

A physical purgative is seldom necessary, and much better and more permanent results can be obtained by using a scientific remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It does not irritate, has a high sounding name, but is what it is represented to be, a mild laxative medicine. It is so mild that thousands of mothers give it to their infants, and yet it is so compounded, and contains such definite ingredients that it will have equally good effect when used by a person suffering from the worst chronic constipation. In fact, among the greatest endorers of Syrup Pepsin are elderly people who have suffered for years and found nothing to benefit them until they took Syrup Pepsin.

It is a fact that millions of families have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, homes like those of Mr. H. W. Fenstermaker, Siegfried, Pa. He says he has had wonderful results from the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, that in fact he has never found a remedy so good, and he is glad to recommend it. The special do-value of this grand laxative medicine is that it is suited to the needs of every member of the family. It is pleasant-tasting, mild and non-irritating. This harsh physics it works gradually and in a very brief time the stomach and bowels are trained to do their work naturally again, when all medicines can be dispensed with.

You can obtain a bottle at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar. The latter size is usually bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. H. Fenstermaker, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal note with your name and address on it will be glad to recommend it. The special do-

In June, the average use of Artificial Light in Residences is 2 55-100 hours per day.

In December, the average use of Artificial Light in Residences is 6 85-100 hours per day.

Therefore, the average use of Electric and Gas Light in the Home is nearly three times as great in December as in June.

A New Island.

Russian explorers returning from a three-year cruise in the arctic sea report the discovery of an island as large as Greenland beyond latitude eighty-one north and longitude one hundred and two east. Whether or not the newly found land should ever develop a commercial value, it will be keenly interesting to scientists. Polar quests of the past decade have already changed to an appreciable degree certain calculations of geography. The earth's land area is now known to be much larger than was formerly supposed. The old estimate of two-thirds water and one-third land must be revised. The Russians' discovery marks another conquest of the unknown and carries a stride further man's wonderful invasion of the planet's solitudes.

It is not impossible that this island, so long hidden in the snows of the far North, may in time be turned to practical account. One writer aptly observes that the great ocean current sweeping upward past Norway raises the temperature of northern Europe and Siberia far above that of points on the same line in British America and Greenland; thus "Frammerfrost" is as warm in summer and, in winter, much warmer than Labrador, which is more than a thousand miles farther south. Though nothing in the way of agriculture is to be expected from so bleak a region, its mineral resources might prove worth exploiting and in that event its climate would not discourage hardy adventure.

The earth's history, and that of matter human history, is as yet but a chapter or two of the great volume that is slowly unfolding. The seats of present day civilization were once a wilderness. Who can say but that the waste places of this time may be busy stages of industry and commerce in some future century?

Broom Handles

Do you realize, light-hearted reader, as you sweep the autumn leaves from your doorstep or make the hearty trim for a cherry evening or otherwise lay hands upon that seemingly simple implement, the broom, that you are, toying with a terrific problem?

Have you heard the warning of the Barnard statistician that ninety million broom handles are rotting to waste each year in this prodigal land and that so dire a drain upon our forest resources calls for serious national thought?

Will you not be one in a crusade of earnest souls to check this wanton extravagance and devise some plan for conserving the country's future supply of broomsticks?

The broom itself is certainly an ephemeral thing. Its purpose in life, as Colonel Roosevelt once said of himself, is to spend and be spent. The better it is used the sooner it wastes away. The good broom dies young; only the bad are burned to the socket. There are, to be sure, rascally brooms that begin to shirk their duty before they are half through their allotted span of service; but the most conscientious broom cannot be expected to last as long as its aristocratic kinsman, the broom brush. Its term is as brief as that of the season's straw of which it is born.

For the broom handle, however, there is no such excuse. A little thrift meant to infinity should make the average broom handle serve several generations, as Chinese garments are said once to have done. Yet, the American people are heedlessly throwing away ninety million broom handles every year.

What is to be done? Shall our noble forests be ruthlessly destroyed merely to satisfy an idle whim for new broom handles? Science admonishes us that this will come to pass unless we grapple this problem in a spirit of practical patriotism. Surely the American people, whose resourcefulness has converted into wealth broken bottles and waste paper and old tin cans and a hundred other once unconsidered trifles, will not fail to utilize the broom handle. Privileged persons may be disposed to treat this matter lightly but the frugal and really patriotic will grasp its far-reaching consequences and never rest satisfied until they have found a solution.

The Secret of Increased Land Values in Tift:

The enriching influence of good roads and progressive farming, which, by the way, generally go side by side, was strikingly witnessed in a recent sale of country lands along the Journal-Herald Highway in Tift county. One hundred and fifty acres were auctioned at prices ranging between eighty-five and a hundred and twenty-five dollars an acre; an entire tract of five acres sold at the latter figure and several others were bought for more than a hundred dollars an acre. In another part of the same county, four hundred acres, much of which is swamp land, sold for correspondingly good prices.

Tift county, as all Georgians know, is in the forefront of the State's good-roads crusade. When it was determined some years ago to extend the National Highway to Jacksonville, the business men of Tift and the farmers in the surrounding district began a vigorous and systematic campaign to bring the highway through their county; and they succeeded by the aid of the State's good-roads law. The energy aroused and organized through this particular undertaking was distributed among many parallel enterprises. In various parts of the county connections with the great central highway were established so that Tift county now enjoys the advantages of a true system of good roads.

To this fact and to the accompanying development of agricultural interests, must be ascribed the rapid and really remarkable increase in real estate values. Well built and well kept roads invariably raise the price and quicken the demand for adjacent farms. They upbuild the community as a whole. They make schools accessible and bring town and country into closer commercial relationships. They make the life of the people more worth living. Little wonder that lands in such a county sell for a hundred and twenty-five dollars an acre; that is merely the beginning of their value.

It is a noteworthy fact that Tift county's truck-farm industries, which are fast becoming one of its chief sources of wealth, have developed step by step with its good roads movement. So soon as improved highways reached into the country about Tift, the idea of diversified crops gained popular favor. Long before this, the gospel of scientific agriculture had been earnestly preached but it was not until good roads made markets accessible in all seasons that new methods of farming were widely applied and the production of foodstuffs seriously undertaken.

The truth is there can be no progress in agriculture where roads are poor. Certainly, truck farming, which is to play so important a role in Georgia's future prosperity, cannot advance without the aid of adequate highways. What Tift county has accomplished in this connection is within the reach of every county that will press forward with the same foresight and energy. The town folk and the country folk of that county have worked together for the upbuilding of their common interests. The Tift chamber of commerce has steadily applied its thought and means to agricultural problems and in all its efforts it has had the farmers' hearty co-operation.

These people began with essentials. They developed their public roads so that the channels of trade and all enterprise might be constantly open. They thus brought into continuous touch all the interests of their county, rural as well as urban. They made possible the truck farm's development and wider utilization of the soil's resources. That is why their land is steadily increasing in value and is attracting a larger and larger number of settlers.

But it isn't blind if it is self-love.

There are lots of "also rans" in the human race.

You can't measure the enjoyment of others by your own.

Business Approval of The Currency Bill.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is a non-political body whose membership includes boards of trade, commercial clubs and kindred organizations in every part of the country. It is devoted to the business interests of the nation as a whole, just as the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is devoted to the business interests of this city.

Especially significant, therefore, is its hearty approval of the banking and currency bill now before Congress. By a referendum vote, its members have endorsed well-nigh unanimously the basic principles embodied in this measure and have urged its enactment.

Could there be better evidence that the rank and file of thoughtful business men are back of the administration in its efforts to secure prompt currency reform?

The Tragedy of Blood

BY FRANK GRAY.
(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Gray.)

The essence of tragedy is the vain struggle of the soul against the inevitable. From the days of the Greek dramatists until man has risen to his loftiest stature when facing the iron front of fate. The steel prison bars that hem souls are those of custom, morals, religion, convention, public opinion, prevailing prejudice, caste.

The fate of the soul was condemned by the fanatic ideas of morality in his time. They thought he was corrupting the state. He was crucified because of the hard doctrines of Phariseism. They thought he threatened their caste.

In medieval times the element of tragedy was plentiful in the conflict of free souls against orthodoxy. Savanarola and Bruno went down before the power of fixed creeds.

In our own day the material for the tragic is not lacking. There are still giant prejudices that hold the public mind, and whose attacks them will be crushed.

One of the most relentless prejudices still powerful among us is race prejudice. In the minds of many thousands of us, perhaps in the sub-consciousness of all white people, lies the feeling that to be born a negro is to be brought into the world under a curse that cannot be escaped.

A striking example of this is the case of William Henry Lee, a book publisher of Chicago, formerly of the firm of Lee & Co. He died on June 30, 1913, leaving, it is said, a considerable fortune.

Upon his death, attention was called to the strange manner of his life. He was kept in a room of mystery. He had no close friends, no known relatives. He was successful in business. In private life he was a recluse.

He was a good dresser, lived well, everything in his clothing, house and environment was of the finest. He was not flashy, but cultured in appearance and habits.

He was a student, literary turn. His past, Mr. Lee, said of him: "Lee was one of the whitest men I ever had dealings with. He was square and true all the time."

But—he had negro blood in his veins! He was not markedly colored. That was his secret tragedy. That separated him from cordial relations with his fellows. That it was which he always felt would arise in the mind of his white friends, and which he had to keep hidden from the public eye.

His life story is as sadly dramatic as any tale of the dark past. Born of a slave mother before the war, becoming a part of a Confederate general during the rebellion, and subsequently a writer in a St. Louis restaurant, then a salesman in Chicago, rising to a position as partner in a book publishing firm, he was, just before his death, engaged in editing what was to be the "first dictionary in America."

An admirable career of force and courage! Yet it was all of no avail to redeem him from his social isolation. There was the blood of the negro in him!

What's my lady doing in these old Virginia days
Of hills and meadows dreaming in the autumn haze?

My lady, lady Dixie,
In her tent of azure gleam
Beside the singing fountains
And the temples of her dream!

What's my lady doing in her groves of melody
That mystic music of the land and of the sea?

My lady, lady Dixie,
At her apple miles of rose
With the sweetest of the land
That my loved Virginia grows!

What's my lady doing in these days of Dixie dreams
Across her fading meadows and her sadly singing streams?

My lady, lady Dixie,
With her brown arms in the air
As she looks to the sunset
That have never heard of care!

What's my lady doing in these moments of the spell
Of ambient autumn beauty in the dingle and the dell?

My lady, lady Dixie,
In her fairy hour of charm
With the wild roses at her bosom
And the dewdrops in her hair!

What's my lady doing in these old Virginia hours
That would haunt the phantoms of the perished summer flowers?

My lady, lady Dixie,
With her true heart as of old
To strew the summer of winter
With the sunnier's dreams of gold.

Let the Child Talk

Dr. S. J. Ganot, French scientist, believes that the only way to develop a child's individuality is to allow him to talk when in the family circle. "A child does not want to be impudent or give back talk," he says. "Most grown-ups think that anything said by a child in reply to an admonition of an elder is impudence. A child wishes to reason. He wishes to present his side of the case. In a word he hears others expressing an opinion, and wishes to do the same. If he is made to be silent his individuality is suppressed. He is mentally stunted, and is not being allowed to grow naturally. The child who is allowed to say what he feels, and to express his individuality in a sane way, will be a normal, intelligent, successful man."—Chicago Tribune.

Manufacturing a Medieval Author

Mark Twain was unwittingly responsible for one of the most humorous occurrences recently reported in the literary world. Having seen a medieval romance by James Branch Cabell in Harper's, he urged the good publisher of "The Book of Merlyn" to publish this far better book. The "Book of Merlyn" was published last fall by Frederick A. Stokes company in book form. Now it is so renowned that Mr. Cabell wrote under the title of his stories "Translated from the French by Nicolas de Cam." This Nicolas was a purely imaginary person invented by the author for the sake of a medieval romance. The book is a masterpiece of medieval romance. It is a story of a knight who is allowed to do pretty much as he likes. His own enjoyment, his own road, his own life, his own story. He is allowed to be as happy as he can be, and an effort should be made to understand him.

There will be no more cases of bad tempered children and of quarrelsome households," says Dr. Ganot. "After the individuality of the child is understood and developed, instead of frowned upon, he will be able to give a simple task or two each day, allow him to eat and sleep and play as he wishes, and you will have a healthy, happy, intelligent child. He will be a normal, intelligent, successful man."—Chicago Tribune.

Quips and Quiddities

"Now, what did you and the defendant talk about?"

"Oh, think about fifteen minutes."

"No, no; I mean what did you talk about?"

"We talked over the telephone."

"Farmer Barnes—I've bought a barometer, Hannah, to tell when it's going to rain, ya know."

"Mrs. Barnes—Why, I never heard of a barometer before. What do you mean?"

"You see, I've bought a barometer, Hannah, to tell when it's going to rain, ya know."

Women as Inventors

Since Voltaire, in his cockade tone said, "There have been very learned women, as there have been women warriors, but there have never been women inventors," men and women, unaware of the facts performed by their own sex, have accepted the statement as true. H. J. Mosans, author of "Women in Science" (Appleton's), asserts that the statement never was true, and least of all, is true now.

He quotes the story of a woman who was out driving with an old farmer in Vermont. He told her, "You women may talk about your rights, but why don't you invent something?"

"Your horse's feedbag and the shade over his head were both of them invented by women," she answered. The old fellow was taken back that he was barely able to gasp, "Do tell!"

Had he investigated further, says Mr. Mosans, he would have found that the flynet on his horse's back, the tugs and other harness trimmings, the shoes on his horse's feet and the buggy seat he then occupied were all the inventions of women. He would doubtless also discover that the corsetry, as well as the snaphook of the halter and the checkered and small unbuttoning device were also the creation of that sex whose capacity he was so disposed to depreciate.

For women have been awarded patents—in some instances several of them—for all the articles the author mentions. He might furthermore have learned that the felties on his horse's legs were also his daughter's idea, had been under women's patents, and that the first and his harness were made by a machine patented by a woman who not only was an inventor but who was for many years the proprietor of a mill in New York.

"What particularly arrests one's attention in reading the patent office reports is not only the large number of inventions by women, but also the wide range of devices which they embrace," the author says. It is not surprising to find them inventing and inventing culinary utensils, sewing machines, washing machines, trunks and bags, toys and games, baskets, screens, awnings, baby carriers, musical instruments, appliances for washing and cleaning, attachments for printing and bookbinding, and many other things, and medical appliances; for these things are in keeping with their proper sphere, but it is surprising to find that the history of modern life is full of the names of women who have had in invention, and in improving agricultural implements, building apparatus, motors and various kinds of gliding apparatus, theatrical stage mechanisms, and above all, the most important of all, a machine for making a device for unloading box cars.

The first woman to receive a patent in the United States, according to Mr. Mosans, was Mary Kies. It was issued May 1, 1809, for a process of straw weaving with silk or other threads. Later Mary Brush was granted a patent for a corset. Other early patents were for a cork stove, an ice cream freezer and for a fan attached to a rocking chair.—Kansas City Star.

The Poet of Sister Songs

With Francis Thompson the shining symbols of the soul are joyfully rough his senses to his spirit. None who has read Sister Songs can fail to note, even to bewilderment, how the trailing metaphors, drawn from the images of things seen, shift and pass and change over the face of the poem in token of the poet's intense and unceasing struggle to express the violence of some of the metaphors broken by the violence of the soul-thrill of the poet; the very vagueness of some of them displays the pleasure of the will to create, and the things, to make the universe his box of toys.

What Anne Ruttenhouse Says

The hair is high again. You can keep it up under your hat if you wish, or you can wait until evening to arrange it in the new style.

It really makes little difference as far as the hat is concerned, unless you have one of the coat shapes that project far out in the back, and for this you need a flat coil of hair arranged across the back of the head from ear to ear. Remember this, for it is important.

The back-shaped hat will remain in vogue at dinner this evening at the restaurant club in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. William H. Huntley, of Buffalo, who are spending some time with Mrs. Huntley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Huntley, in Ashley Park.

OUR ASTROLOGER

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1913.

It fortune thus would find Wait till the stars are kind.

ASTROLOGERS find the stars unfriendly today and it is well, they admonish, to act with caution. Both the Sun and Neptune are in adverse aspect.

Under this unfavorable aspect all who are employed should be especially diligent as they are likely to find their superior exacting and hard to please. It is not a favorable time to seek preferment.

The influences are held to be peculiarly unfortunate for all who deal in gold for bankers and jewelers.

This government prevails all others, whether governors or mayors are likely to meet with official difficulties.

The sign is unfortunate for women in business affairs. The mutual aspect of Venus and Jupiter gives the star which guides commerce a milder power, the seers say. It is well to exercise prudence and to avoid speculation of every sort.

The Sun's place is especially evil for persons who plan great financial operations. They should keep their own counsel and not speak of their schemes. Under this configuration the stars are believed to impel to rashness in going to the power to produce the ancient lore placed stress on the stars' power to lead even the humblest domestic tasks and according to this interpretation, it is unwise to make for any and other household tasks.

It is prophesied that Chicago will be the scene of rioting and disturbances before the end of the year, when labor troubles will be numerous.

Persons whose birthdate it is should not speculate. They will lose money which they risk. They will have a trying year and should avoid speculation.

Children born on this day may be willful and headstrong. Boys will have a fair chance for success. Girls have state's most widely known conductors.

Mrs. Jesse Cobb, of this city, will be invited to the home of Mrs. John J. Ryan and Miss Charles Ryan, who will leave next week for Fort Rucker, Ark.

Invited to meet the honor guests were Mrs. Harry W. Anderson, Mrs. L. T. Garrett, Mrs. J. B. Brown, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. E. T. Winston, Mrs. Howard Ware, Mrs. W. A. Winship, Mrs. Mary Brown and Miss Florence Williams.

Western Open Golf Championship Tournament Off At Memphis

HANK IS ALWAYS TRYING TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE POOR CHINK--BUT!

--BY FARREN

Foreign Women Lead at Golf

English, Irish and Canadian Champions Survived Opening Round of Match Play

(By Associated Press.)

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 15.—Play in the Western Open golf tournament, which play in the nineteenth annual women's national golf championship tournament, yesterday on the links of the Wilmington Country club, resulted in the elimination of the titleholder, Miss Margaret Curtis of Boston, and Miss Katherine Butler of Fall River, a former champion. Miss Harley finished fourth with a card of 81, while Mrs. E. H. Stockton, of Plainfield, who defeated her yesterday, 2 up, barely qualified with a score of 112.

The visitors all won in comparative ease. Miss Gladys Havens, former English champion, defeated Miss Frances C. O'Brien, former American champion from Philadelphia, 4 up and 5 to play; Miss Mabel Harrison, Irish champion, won from Mrs. W. L. Hirsch, Philadelphia, 6 up and 4 to play; and Miss Mabel Deed, English and Canadian champion, took the match from Miss Mabel Deed, of Wilmington, 5 up and 3 to play.

Miss Violet Foley, of British Columbia, won from Miss Lillian Hyde, a former metropolitan champion of New York, 4 up and 3 to play. In addition to Mrs. Stockton and Miss Caroline Palmer, the American titleholders in the second round Wednesday will be Miss Harriet Curtis of Boston, sister of the defeated champion, Mrs. C. H. Vanderhook and Mrs. E. H. Pitter, Philadelphia; Miss Frances O'Brien, Miss Myra Helman, Miss Elaine Isenhardt and Mrs. F. S. O'Brien, Chicago; Miss Marion Holt, metropolitan titleholder, and Mrs. A. L. Oak, New York.

The best golf of the day was shown by Miss Harriet Curtis of England, in her match with Miss O'Brien. She made the first nine holes in 41 strokes in spite of the high wind.

The match in which Miss Curtis, present American champion, was eliminated by Miss Caroline Palmer, Michigan club, Chicago, was the most interesting contest of the day. Miss Palmer, who twice has won the women's national golf championship, took the match on the eighteenth hole, 1 up and 1 to play.

Miss Curtis, out 58, in 57, in her match with Miss Harley, Mrs. E. H. Stockton went out in 59 and returned in 47.

Miss Harley, out 49, in 47.

GOLF GOSSIP VALUE OF THE STROKE GAME

"The popularity of metal-play golf is probably the eighth wonder of the world to those to whom play by strokes is anathema," writes Harold Saunders in the World of Golf. There are many really good men who confess that they are beaten as soon as the card and pencil are introduced. It is merely because they allow themselves to be influenced by these simple articles of stationery, and not because they are unable to play golf. A metal card is like the book of the recording angel. It registers a faithful account of our sins of omission and commission. If we take three or four strokes to recover from a bunker—a small stream—then that we might be inclined to forget or allow over in recting a match by holes—the card bears witness to our fall from grace. There is no doubt that the reason why the metal-play is unpopular with so many golfers is the knowledge that the implacable marker is at hand, busily registering their misdeeds in strokes, strokes, strokes. It has a curious psychological effect, which makes them play considerably below their proper form.

On the other hand, of course, there are some people constituted so mathematically that the presence of the recorder inspires them to give of their best. The fact that the professional always insists that the stroke game is the most severe test, and the only just way of deciding the open championship, shows that this is the most searching form of golf. So far as my own experience goes, it is generally avoided by the beginner and the long handicap man. They will make a match with anybody, and to hear them talk of it afterward you might think they had been round in something like a par course. A derivation of a fine drive here, a beautiful second there, and long putts on this green, and that—all confirmed by the possibly beaten opponent—leads inevitably to the impression of a faultless round. The player himself probably thinks that he is giving a correct idea of his game.

There are not many men with sufficient strength of mind to look facts in the face, and so it is often that we meet a player who has the courage to keep his score in a match. After all, he is only adopting the secret means of finding out whether his game is improving or deteriorating. Most of us are too liable to feel amply compensated for an incalculable number of highly indifferent shots by the memory of a few good ones. We begin to think that we are much better than we really are, and only the purifying effect of a metal round will put us in our proper place. The result of the first round or two may be that we shall threaten to clothe ourselves in sackcloth, and forewear the game forever, but we shall do neither. We shall reserve with card and pencil, and gradually find the improvement we so long desired.

It is worth remembering that one of the secrets of the leading professionals is that they always play for a score. Even in match play they never lose sight of the fact that it is the lowest score that generally wins. It is a practice that might well be followed by the struggling amateur. I witnessed the final of an important tournament the other day, when one of the players insisted on holing out every putt and keeping a careful record of his score. Besides being good for one's golf, the habit is useful from a disciplinary point of view. It helps to keep us modest about our game, and if some of us could acquire this virtue it would be a step in the right direction.

STRAIGHT DRIVE.

Capt. Young, of Penn., Hurt in Scrimmage

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—Football practice at Franklin field yesterday afternoon was somewhat disastrous to the University of Pennsylvania varsity eleven, for besides being defeated by the scrubs in the scrimmage match, two touchdowns to none, two star players received injuries which may keep them out of the game with Brown Saturday.

Captain Young in an attempt to down Merrill, the varsity substitute quarterback, received a bad cut above and one below his right eye. The coaches are not sure that Captain Young will be able to play in the Brown game.

Englishman Wins French Golf Honor

Chantilly, France, Oct. 15.—George Dunlop, the fast playing English professional, yesterday won the French open golf championship with an aggregate of 284 strokes for the four rounds of the eighteen-hole course.

James Brad, of England, who has held both the British and French open championships, was second with 307. H. Sherlock, also of England, finished third with 309; Arnaud Mansey, former French champion, finished with 310, and Dr. H. D. Gillies, a London amateur, scored 311.

Dunlop, played like a machine. Dr. Gillies led in the morning round and, as he had beaten the professionals in the first day's play, many expected he would repeat Oulme's performance in the American championship, finished in the first list.

Ray went around the eighteen-hole course in seventy strokes, eight below bogey and two better than any score ever made on the links. At the end of the morning play the English pair were 3 up in the match with the St. Louis men.

Vardon was the better player of the two during the morning, and Ray during the afternoon. The finals for the thirty-six holes were:

Vardon, 77; Ray, 70; Stickey, 74; Kenney, 77.
